Dear Editorial Team-IISTE

Sorry, my examination was delayed because of selection of both my papers. After via selection of my papers to be modified as a requirement of exam, so my university's request was not paper entitled " A TEXT ANALYSIS OF DISCOURSE SEMANTICS OF SOCIAL CONTEXT OR LEXICOGRAMMAR (An analysis on Text in Context of Meaning Beyond the Clause)" to be modified but paper entitled " CONTRASTIVE ANALYSIS BETWEEN ENGLISH AND INDONESIAN PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES (A Narrative Text Analysis of Legends in Perspective of Morphology)" which has been ACCEPTED with Journal of Education and Practice, ISSN (Paper) 2222-1735 ISSN (Online)2222-288X must be modified.

Due to the urgent thing, I inform you that it will be made as a requirement for examination of my dissertation at Semarang State University, but my university has different format in part of the writing of author. It means that in writing author may not write one author (Pauzan only), but all my promoters must be written. For example:

Abstract

This research deals with finding the similarities and differences, and describing the types of the English and Indonesian prefixes and suffixes for the narrative text of Legends.

In this research, writer used descriptive qualitative research and contrastive methodology to find out the valid data. After investigating the data, writer found some findings based on the analysis of the type of English and Indonesian prefixes and suffixes. There are four types of English prefix namely quantified, locative, temporal, and negation prefixes. In the narrative texts, writer found four words viz in negation prefixes. English suffixes own four types namely nominal, verbal, adjectival, and adverbial suffixes. There was not word categorized as nominal and verbal suffixes, there were two words indicated as adjectival suffixes, and four as adverbial suffixes. Vice versa, Indonesian prefixes possess five prefixes namely forming verb, adjective, noun, numeral and interrogative. forming verb is fifteen five words, forming adjectival is one word, forming noun is three words, forming interrogative is one words and there is not word of forming numeral. There are five types of Indonesian suffixes namely forming, verb, adjective, noun, numeral, and interrogative. From the five prefixes, writer only found two words namely in forming naoun. Writer found differences and similarities from both of them; In English suffixes possess adverbial suffixes but there are not in Indonesian suffixes. However in Indonesian suffixes possess types of suffixes namely forming numeral and interrogative, and in English suffixes do not possess these types. The same types of English and Indonesian suffixes are; both of them possess suffixes namely forming noun, verb and adjective.

Keywords: Contrastive Analysis, English and Indonesian Prefixes and Suffixes.

I shall plan to register exam this month (April). Accordingly I hope you can help me to modify it for one paper only as the special requirement for the examination of my dissertation. According to the information from Editorial Team IISTE that the modification charge for one article is 75 USD. Okay, I am ready and agree to pay the modification charge.

The addition information, if it is okay, I would like to request the proofs of the academic paper acceptance letter of the modification, and the publication of paper modification. The two proofs are asked by my university. I wait for your response.

Sincerely,
Pauzan

Dear Editorial IISTE,

Actually, my college requests only one paper that includes promoters as authors in my research paper. Accordingly, if I submit the new topic of my research paper, logically, it is important to submit the paper modification. Therefore I decide for one of them to choose the new topic for being submitted. I apologize to you for my decision.

Sincerely yours,

Pauzan
